"Times, of Course"

That's what all the newsboys say when asked which Barre paper sells the best. There is no doubt about it.

The special Washington county grand jury which closed its duties yesterday certainly has something to show for its four weeks' work with sixteen indictments returned.

It seems that the New York city voters did not follow "Big Bill" Devery's advice to vote for Devery, as his vote was ridiculously small. And Devery was claiming at one time that he was going to be elected mayor of New York.

The equipment of the Barre fire department has now reached a stage which may be considered satisfactory. Within a few weeks a new hook and ladder truck and a combination chemical and hose wagon have been added to the department. Both pieces of apparatus are of the latest models and are thoroughly up to date. The city has ample fire protection for several years to come. Heretofore it has been the cry, and with cause, that the department was weak in equipment.

Election in Kentucky was something more than an election in some places. It was a pitched battle, with the odds on the side which was most heavily armed. In one instance six men were killed and several were wounded. Evidently the participants concluded that it was a good time to work out some old scores and work them out they did. Fortunately this semi-civilized belt does not extend beyond the bounds of old Kentucky to any extent. Were such occurrences general throughout the country, it would not be long before elections would be entirely unnecessary.

It all simmers down to a question as to which is the more profitable for a state, to be an industrial region, or a sportsman's paradise. Vermont is not large enough in area for both.—St. Albans Messenger.

The question is easily enough answered. There are few people, indeed, who would say that as a "sportsman's paradise" Vermont would be more profitable than as an "industrial region." Vermont with its comparatively small wooded tracts could scarcely serve as a game preserve, nor would the people care to see the industrial regions transformed into their former wildness just for the purpose of raising game. What industrial activity the state now has is treasured highly and would not be exchanged for all the shekels that the sportsman might pour in. But the wheels of industry are far from covering the state's area, and until the time has arrived when the game shall have been driven out by those same wheels of industry what is the objection to getting as much profit as possible out of the limited "sportsman's paradise?" But let not the advance of industry be checked in the least by any catering to the sportsman, to the detriment of the other.

Slot Machines in Spain.

Shortly after the Spanish-American war, says the World's Work, among the first American novelties sent to Spain were the nickel in the slot machines, the musical kind. Unluckily the first machines played American airs. They were quickly demolished. When the next lot of machines were imported it was carefully advertised in advance that these contrivances would play Spanish airs only. This was taken as a sort of national compliment, and the American slot machines jumped into sudden favor, especially the gambling varieties, as the Spaniards are very fond of all games of chance. In a place like Malaga there are now more than forty such machines, each earning $3.50 daily on the average.

A Claim Against the Shah.

The French architect Philippe Merlat was commissioned by the shah of Persia to build a pavilion for his majesty on the exposition grounds in 1900, but he has, it is said, never been able to collect a franc in payment. The French courts being unable to aid him, he has appealed to The Hague peace tribunal to help him in obtaining a settlement of his claim.

Goode, the proprietor, who closed the Memphremagog house, and moved in only Saturday, was obliged to move back to the Memphremagog house Monday. A new boiler will be required to replace the one injured.

TOWN TOPICS.

Marriages are on the increase in Boston, according to statistics. And this notwithstanding the largely increased attendance at Radcliffe and Wellesley. —Lowell Citizen.

There's no depression in the marriage industry. There were twenty-five more October brides in Boston this year than there were in the same time a year ago. —Boston Globe.

First Glass Windows.

The first glass window in England was one put in the Telford abbey in the year 980 A. D. Glass windows did not come into general use for many hundred years after that date. As late as 1577 the glass casements of Alnworth castle were regularly taken down and packed away whenever the owner and his family went visiting.

College Yells Revised.

[A movement to revise and censorize the college yell has been proposed.] The raucous yell Of old Cornell And the whooping yell of Yale, The Harvard howl And the Princeton growl To a milder tone must pale.

The U. C. shriek And the Vassar squeak And the Hopkins ribald blare; Northwestern's yell Of a lion whelp Shall be softer on the air.

The Wellesley squeal And the Stanford peal And the rah, rah of old Knox; The West Point cry And the Yale yell Must eliminate their shocks.

And the hoop-la-dee-dee Of the Chalmers Shall be made more circumspect, But the college yell Will sound like—well, It will hold more intellect! —Chicago Tribune.

JINGLES AND JESTS.

But Not Swiftness. The man was writing rapidly. But he was writing very slowly. For he, being illiterate, was undecided as to whether he should use one or two "e's" in spelling it. Yet he was writing rapidly. But very slowly. —Baltimore American.

Among the Four Hundred. "I can't imagine what made the bridegroom so nervous." "I can." "What?" "He didn't have time to get his prospective father-in-law's check certified before the ceremony." —Chicago Post.

The Conversational Salesman. "I went to California," said the distinguished western man, "as a forty-niner." "Dear me," rejoined the very annoying girl, "were you marked down from fifty?" —Washington Star.

Equal Distribution of Space!

Now Listen to This!

A perfect Shoe should contain not a single particle of space more than necessary, otherwise the Shoe becomes large and ungainly. The Dorothy Dodd Shoe leaves more space for the foot than any other Shoe we know of, yet the Shoe itself is absolutely smaller than the ordinary Shoe. That is because it equally distributes space.
